Agave americana v. medio-picta 'Alba'

WHITE STRIPED CENTURY PLANT

The common name refers to its distinctive creamy white, mid-leaf stripe which is surrounded by a luscious blue-gray color. Medium to small, sharp recurved teeth run up its edges ending in a black terminal spine. These are moderate to slow growing Agaves that grow to a very manageable size. With their size, form and dramatic color pattern, these are deemed some of the most desirable Agaves for containers, raised beds and entryway accent plants. Acclimate young or new plants to western exposures to prevent damaging sun scald on the white center stripes. Low to moderate water during summer months will keep plants looking fresh, little to no water is needed from fall through spring.
