

Calliandra eriophylla

PINK FAIRY DUSTER

Pink frilly blooms adorn truly tough shrubs. Typically, smaller than its Baja cousin, this tough native little shrub is adaptable to many different sites and applications. Dark, green tightly arranged small compound leaves cover the short gray colored stems with main blooming occurring from late winter into early summer. Blooms are round clusters of pink to white stamens that are attractive to hummingbirds and other pollinators. Low maintenance with low water needs. As with other flowering desert shrubs, do not shear them for size or shape. Instead, selectively thin out older woody stems as needed, which is usually every 2-3 years.
