

Citrus x aurantium

Sour Orange

SOUR ORANGE

Sour oranges have been cultivated for centuries, and they are used as durable but highly ornamental trees. They bloom profusely with waxy white flowers heavy with fragrance, which are followed by large deep orange colored fruits that can hang on trees for up to a year. Like other citrus, they have deep green, glossy leaves, and an upright, thorny branching structure. They bloom heaviest from February through March. Sour orange trees are low maintenance and long-lived. Although they can grow to 25-30 ft. high & wide, ornamental orange trees are often pruned or sheered to stay much smaller. Savvy modern landscape designers have used them effectively for living walls and privacy screens. Provide these citrus trees with well-drained soil, regular deep watering, especially during the growing season.
