Dalea capitata

GOLD DALEA, OR YELLOW DALEA

Golden flowering adaptable groundcover. An interesting and adaptable herbaceous looking woody subshrub or groundcover. Its ability to go winter dormant in cold, high desert landscapes and its tolerance for fierce reflected heat in the hottest, low desert locations makes Gold Dalea a valuable groundcover. Low mounding plants with dark green compound leaves with a light citrus scent. In late summer to fall, golden-yellow pea-like flowers appear held well above the foliage. These herbaceous looking plants require well-draining soil and while they will tolerate some dappled shade, more sun yields the best flower displays.
