TURPENTINE BUSH, 'AGUIRRE' TURPENTINE BUSH

Rugged, versatile evergreen small shrubs. Bright green soft but resinous needle-like leaves on woody stems with masses of bright yellow flowers appearing in fall. Moderate to fast growing native shrubs for low to upland desert landscapes. Relevant as a revegetation plant as it is for more formal or refined desert designs. Plants are quite drought tolerant once mature. Light spring trimming or shearing can be done to freshen up their appearance. 'Aguirre' is a reference to Aguirre Springs State Park in S. NM outside of Las Cruces where this plant grows naturally. This NM selection appears more floriferous due to wider and more numerous rays encircling each flower, unlike most Turpentine flowers that form no rays.
