SHAMEL ASH

Dark green oval-shaped reliable shade tree. Shamel Ash are reluctantly deciduous, being the last trees in the fall to early winter to drop their leaves and are usually the first shade trees to leaf out again in early spring. Large, lustrous dark green leaves make it a regional favorite. They grow moderately fast, especially with deep supplemental watering during summer. Their shape is oval, typically growing a bit taller than they are wide, but give them room. Some mature specimens top out at 80 ft. tall. Immature or newly planted trees should be protected from hard freezes since they are resistant to go into dormancy as they should. Overall, they are an easy shade tree.
