PINK TRUMPET VINE

Versatile, big pink blooming vine or large shrub. These South African, long-blooming plants can form a large tuberous root making them as cold hardy as they are heat tolerant, which is a beneficial characteristic. They have bright emerald green, compound leaves on square herbaceous stems the will form mounding woody, self-supportive stems with maturity. Evergreen to semi-evergreen plants can go completely dormant but they grow back quickly as soon temperatures warm in spring. During spring and summer branch ends have fist-sized clusters of large striking pink tubular blooms that are rarely followed by long seed pods. These are clean, easy-to-grow plants for low to mid-desert landscapes. They are one of the few vining plants that will easily tolerate hot western sun, which makes them a valuable option for fence or wall coverings, trellises, arbors, or lattice work.
