Ruellia brittoniana x 'Katie'

'KATIE' DWARF RUELLIA

Dainty looking but durable dwarf selection with purple flowers. This is a dwarf selection of Mexican Ruellia found in a batch of seedlings at a nursery, years ago in Conroe, TX. 'Katie' is a vigorous, herbaceous small mounding plant that eventually form woody stems. They have long soft, linear dark green somewhat ruffled, dagger-shaped leaves. Stems grow in a well-behaved mound to about 10 in. tall, rarely to 1 ft. The trumpet-shaped flowers are violet purple and hug the top of the plant. Heat and drought tolerant as others are, but they do appreciate well-drained soils and a bit of extra moisture during summers in low deserts. Plants can be cut down to the ground to refresh their foliage or if they suffer from winter freezes. Easy to grow and long-blooming.
