

Trichocereus candicans

(Syn. Soehrensia candicans, Echinopsis candicans, & Cereus candicans.)

ARGENTINE GIANT

These are shrubby, spreading cacti with bright green, thick cylindrical decumbent arms. They typically have 9-10 ribs lined with thin, sharp golden spines. They mature to form irregular clumps, with arms radiating out from a central point. During spring into summer, they display large, showy white fragrant flowers that often grow in bouquets. They tolerate full sun to filtered light in well-drained unimproved soils. They are low water use and equally low maintenance.
