PLANT DETAILS

Pittosporum tobira 'Wheeler's Dwarf'

'WHEELER'S DWARF' MOCK ORANGE

Dark green, compact well-behaved shrubs. This is a compact evergreen selection with long, dark green spatula-shaped leaves with a high sheen. Like all Pittosporum sp., the leaves are whorled around the stems, but because of their compact habit this is not as noticeable, and they just form fluffy but tight mounds. They prefer regular irrigation with consistent moisture to grow and look their best, but high heat is not an issue. Morning or filtered sun in low deserts is best. Clustered cream-colored flowers in early spring have an orange blossom scent. With no seed pods, no thorns, and a well-behaved small compact growth habit they make a good choice for residential or commercial landscapes.
