

Lantana hybrid 'New Gold'

'NEW GOLD' LANTANA

Solid gold colored round blooms against dark green foliage. 'New Gold' is a popular, well-behaved Lantana selection from Texas. Lantanas are subtropical native, woody perennial flowering plants. 'New Gold' are self-sterile which means more blooming and no dropping or reseeding fruits. Plants have compact growth with oval to round, rough dark green leaves and slightly prickly stems. After flowering plants can be lightly pruned or sheared for size control, but choosing the right sized cultivar for the space is important to help reduce how frequently the Lantana's need to be trimmed. Cutting them back too frequently can eliminate flower displays. Regular, supplemental water during the hottest months keeps them healthy and happy.
