

Setcreasea Pallida

TRADESCANTIA / PURPLE HEART

It's hard to beat the visual impact of the dark purple foliage on this succulent groundcover. They are herbaceous, trailing groundcovers with attractive and distinctive dark purple foliage. The heart-shaped flowers that give this plant its common name are small lavender-pink, which appear nearly all year from the ends of every stem, but they are insignificant compared to the overall striking color of the foliage itself. This plant makes a complementary and cooling groundcover for shade to partial sun locations around plants with green or bluish-green palettes. It works well with grasses and palms around pools and patios or spilling out of containers. Little to no maintenance required. Frosted plants can recover quickly after being cut back, and cuttings easily re-root if put back in ground.
